12th December 1952]

In practice, persons whose mother-tongue happened to be one of the five languages referred to above are exempted from passing a test in their mother-tongue and they have to pass only one language test.

Under the same rule a Health Inspector whose mother-tongue is Tamil or Malayalam, has to pass the test in Telugu or Kannada. As Tamil and Telugu are the two principal languages of the State, the rules were amended with effect from 1st January 1951 so as to require a Health Inspector whose mother-tongue is neither Tamil nor Telugu to pass the test in one of the two languages. This rule applies to persons who commenced their probation on or after the 1st January 1951. Those who commenced their probation before the 1st January 1951 are governed by the old rules.

" (b) An officer has to pass all the prescribed tests within the period of probation and unless he passes the test he is not entitled to increments. This is a rule applicable to all the Services and not merely to the Health Inspectors."
